Ladies' and Girls' Ready-to-Wear Garments.

What is Generally Accepted As Correct

Gray, in all its shades, has by universal acceptance been proclaimed the king of colors for Autumn 1905. The most reliable fashion delineators hinted some time ago that this would be the case, so we took the hint and turned our thoughts and endeavors toward bringing together a contrasting assortment of correctly and stylishly modeled suits in all the various shades of gray.

Every true woman's aim is to be stylishly dressed, and no woman can be considered stylishly dressed unless she is correctly dressed. In getting a suit here you are assured of the latter; therefore, further argument would be superfluous—our stock of suits being at once correct, stylish, and in every way first-class.

One graceful long coated model at $25.00 is composed of best quality homespun cloth in a stone gray shade. A model forming an ideal "all occasion" suit being serviceable, yet essentially dressy. Other long coated styles are made of novelty materials, cut upon mannish lines, and carry unique individuality with them, which make them distinct from all others.

Tailored Suits $12 to $75
Separate Skirts $5 to $25
Silk Waists - $5 to $35

INDIANA'S AUDITOR

A DRUNKARD AND COMMON GAMBLER.

Is Severely Denounced By the Governor.

STATE'S MONEY
SQUANDERED.

Governor Hanly has done the right in removing from office the Auditor of the State, David E. Sherick. The office was vacated on Sept. 14. The Governor forced his resignation.

At Hamilton Ind., on Tuesday of last week in an address at the request of the Thirtieth Indiana Regiment Governor Hanly made while his reason for his action, and figures were used to show what became of the money belonging to the State that was lost by "David E. Sherick, auditor of the State and common gambler." The Governor charged that $10,000 of the State's money went "by check into the hands of the gentleman who was then operating a Casino at French Lick. The Governor then enumerated a list of what he calls "wild cat" securities, aggregating a face value of $75,000 into which the State's money went.

ABSENT BECAUSE DRUNK.

Following, he charged that Sherick's continued absence from the session of the State Board of Tax Commissioners was "occasioned by drinking bouts and midnight carousals around the gambling table from which he could not recover in time to meet the commission." He charged that Sherick, at the time the Monon railroad came up for assessment, argued that the as-sement be allowed to remain at $18,000 a mile, because, in that case, a friend of his, to whom he was under great obligation, personally, could get permanent employment with the company if the assessment could be kept at $18,000.

SERIOUS CHARGES.

"There is evidence, overwhelming and convincing, that Sherick was a common gambler, and that he, at the time of his resignation, and had been for two years, in the habit of losing large sums of money, not his but yours, at the gaming table.

"Certain people claim that gambling and an open door to vice are essential to the material prosperity of municipal communities. I do not think so, but you are jury. It is for you to decide.

"Before my inauguration, I received trustworthy information that he had written to the management of several railway companies in December, 1904, over his own signature as auditor of State asking them to send him all passes intended for members of the General Assembly then about to convene, stating in substance that he expected to have some legislation of personal interest to him before that body and if they send their transportation to him for distribution he would see that their interest and his were cared for at the same time.

RESIGNATION DEMANDED.

"On the evening of September 12 I was informed by one who had been aiding him and in whom I have confidence that he could not make payment on the 15th. I then sent him a verbal demand for his immediate resignation. It did not come, some of his friends did come and informed me that the money could be raised on conditions that the scandal be kept and he be retained in office.

"Upon inquiry I learned that some of the men who were to furnish the money were representatives of large railway interests in the State; that Sherick and his friends were depending upon them, and that their assistance depended upon his retention in office. I could make no such bargain as that.

"CHOOSE YE THIS DAY"

In our land are pre-eminently, Disputed darlings, sweet and fair; In the bar-room stands the lotteries, Which, O voter, will you swear? Rates of drink, with hopes in air, Future men of future years? Boasting in their day? All our lives, and hopes, and fears.

In the bar-room are the bottles, Filled with poison rank and vile; Holding forth and swift destruction, Waiting for each mother's child; Enemies of homes and mothers, Enemies of children fair; Years of blood we need to witness, Years of grief and quick despair. Strange that they so long oppressed us, Strange that none have voted thus; Hear one cry, O men of Bradford! Won't you cast your vote for us? For the lady or the bottle? You must cast your vote to day: For the men of future ages Or their lifetime enemy.

For the mother at the hearthstone With the baby on her knee; Or the bottle in the bar-room, Which, O voter, shall it be? For the lady or the bottle? Vote for one surety must! Hear the cry of Bradford's mothers, Won't you cast your vote for us?

The Constitutional Amendment and What is Aback of it

The people of Kentucky should be on their guard about the changes that will be asked for in the next few years regarding changes in our State constitution.

The new constitution put a stop to much expensive and dangerous legislation and threw a safe guard of protection around and about the right of the people that they never enjoyed before.

It put a stop to rich and powerful corporations, by corruption and bribery, securing subsidies from counties, districts and municipalities, thereby entailing debts upon the people that lasted for generations before they were paid, and many of them are yet unpaid.

The new constitution was a great improvement over the old one, in the equalization of taxation, but no sooner had the corporations and the tax manipulators in the large cities thought the people had forgotten its provisions than, they set in to bring about an amendment to the constitution to do away with the avulorem system of taxation, the only equitable system known to man, and in its place establish the franchise system, which means to make the burden heavier on the ordinary taxpayer and lighten it on the corporation, so they will claim their earning power is not sufficient for them to be taxed but little.

This amendment was finally carried by a small majority at the regular election two years ago, and as a result the Legislature that is to meet this coming fall will be asked to increase the rate of taxation in order to meet the deficit caused by the application of this amendment.

What is the next move? The next step is to abolish the Australian ballot system and return to the old antiquated viva voce, or open ballot system, where intimidation, rowdism and corrupt ion can run riot at the polls.

If this amendment carries, then the next step will be to repeal that part of the constitution that now prevents counties, towns and districts from voting subsidies to railroads and other corporations, and which prevents the Legislature from spending its time in expensive class legislation. So it can be seen that there is a deep laid scheme to annul and destroy the usefulness of the safest and best constitution the State of Kentucky ever had.

It certainly behooves the people to study this matter over between now and the election and inform themselves, so as not to be imposed upon.

It will be a dark day for Kentucky if this amendment carries and our elections are put under the control of the corporations dominated on election day by the very worst elements of the election mobs. This is only another scheme to abridge the election franchise of the voter.—Mayfield Messenger Democrat.

A GOLDEN WEDDING Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Glover Have Trod the Paths of Life To- gether For Fifty Years To- day—Took the Mar- riage Vows Septem- ber 12, 1855.

Today, September 12th, is the golden wedding day, or fiftieth anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Glover, West Division avenue, and Mrs. J. M. Hughes; Mrs. Hermon Hawkins, their niece, with other relatives, had planned to give them a genuine golden supper at the home of Mr. E. A. Lindsay, who is Mrs. Glover's brother, but were prevented from doing so by the untimely illness of Mr. Glover.

The house was already decorated in yellow and white flowers and drapery and everything was in readiness, when Mr. Glover was taken quite ill with flux which of course put a stop to it all. But the venerable couple, though debarred the social pleasure of meeting of their family and their chosen friends at the hospitable board of their brother, were very pleasantly reminded that today was their "golden wedding" by quite a number of gifts of gold coin, which was presented them by their young relatives as the most suitable remembrance upon such a day.

On September 12th, 1855, Lindorf A. Glover and Mary M. Lindsay were married at Mount Sterling, Ky. A greater part of their lives was spent in Kentucky, but removed to Jackson about fifteen years since, and eight or ten years ago they bought property and built a home upon W. Division avenue, where they have since resided.

Mr. and Mrs. Glover were the parents of eleven children, of whom only two, Robert and Miss Pickett, survive, both of whom live with them, and Mr. Glover, who is 84 years of age, has never had to use glasses and is in perfect possession of all of his faculties; as is as active as most men who are twenty years his junior, and his unfortunate attack yesterday is particularly deplorable, for both himself and his wife are in excellent health and great spirits to enjoy the golden wedding. Let us hope that Mr. Glover's illness will be brief and that this auspicious anniversary will bring much happiness to both himself and wife and that both will live long to remember it.

Quite a number of cards announcing the celebration of their golden wedding were sent to their friends and relatives at a distance.

I do not know one good thing about the Saloon. It is an evil that has not one redeeming thing in all its history of crime, which it is to good men. It breaks the law of God and man. It desecrates the Sabbath; it defiles public order; it tramples under foot the tenderest feelings of humanity; it profanes the name of religion; it is a moral pestilence that blights the very atmosphere of town and country; a blur upon purity; a clog upon progress; a check upon the noble impulses; it is an incentive to falsehood, deceit, and crime. From such a hateful fountain head can there flow a clear stream? Can you name one good thing that the saloon has ever done for humanity—one good thing done for humanity—one good thing done for humanity in which it has brought forth fruits unto righteousness—one influence, sweet and healthful and pure, gracious and beautiful, which linger lovingly in the memory of men, which have buried the run power, to make them say: "God bless the saloon for the good it did?" Search through the history of this hateful thing and read one page over which some mother can bow her grateful head and thank God for all the saloon did for her boy. There is no such record. All its history is written in tears and blood, with smears of shame and crime, and dark blot of disgrace.—Bob Burdett.

What we want is men and women who for the love of home and country will enter the struggle to win, and after carefully studying the plan of action, draw the sword and throw away the scabbard, determined only to cease the struggle when victory comes or peace our homes and country.—John B. Finch.

ANNOUNCEMENTS.

We are authorized to announce JAMES L. BOWEN as a candidate for Justice of Montgomery County, subject to the action of the Republican party.

Don't fail to register and receive your certificate October 3rd, one day only. Hold to your certificate.

Judge J. E. Cantrill, of the Court of Appeals, is not sitting with the Court. His health will not permit. We think the proper thing to do is to resign. Since his election he has been sick.

The indications from New York are that the Life Insurance Companies are making a bad use of the policy-holders' money by contributing to political campaign funds. We have wondered how real and prospective policy-holders feel when they know how the money is being squandered in big commissions, salaries, graft, and expenses incurred by State Insurance Commissioners who investigate affairs. Thus the money goes and the many foot the bills.

The "Kentucky Issue" is the Anti-saloon League paper of Kentucky and is edited by Rev. L. C. Kelly, of Sharnburg, and H. E. Cleaton, of Louisville. Its first issue is before us, and we are free to say its arrangement is free from fault. Articles clear, forcibly and concisely written; arguments unanswerable by friends of the saloon, and we are sure under the leadership of these interested and enthusiastic leaders will be a source of much good and will be influential in a large measure in driving the saloon business from Kentucky. We gladly welcome it to our table of exchanges and hope all lovers of higher morals will become its patrons.

THE DEMON OF DRINK.

(By a young lady, who was told that she was a monomaniac in her hatred of alcoholic liquors.)
Go, feel what I have felt,
Go, hear what I have heard,
Sick 'neath a blow a father dealt
And the cold, proud world's scorn.
This struggle on, from year to year,
Till my sole rest the scolding tear.
Go, weep as I have wept
Over a loved father's fall;
See every cherished gown dark sweep,
Yon's sweetness turned to gall;
Hear faded flowers strewn all the way
That led me up to my day.
Go, kneel as I have knelt;
Implore, beseech and pray,
Strive the besotted heart to slay,
The downy couch to stay,
Be east with bitter curse aside,
Till prayers barbed, thy tears defile.
Go, stand where I have stood,
And see the strong man bow;
Win gasping teeth, lips bathed in blood,
And cold and livid brow;
Go catch his wandering glance and see
There mirrored his son's misery.
Go, hear what I have heard,
The sole of and despair,
As mine, 'y's feeling-fount has stirred,
And its revelations there
Have told him what he might have been,
Had he the drinker's fate foreseen.
Go, to a mother's side,
And her crossed spirit cheer;
Till she own deep anguish cease,
Wipe from her cheek the tear;
Mark her dimmed eye, her furrowed brow,
The gray that streaks her dark hair now,
The toll-worn frame, the trembling limb,
And trace the ruin back to him
Whose plighted faith in early youth,
Promised eternal love and truth,
But who, forewarned, hath yielded up
This promise to the deadly cup,
And led her down from love and light,
From all that made her pathway bright,
And chained her there mid' want and strife,
Till lowly thing—a drunkard's wife!
And stamped on child's brow, so mild,
That winning light—a drunkard's child!

Go, hear, and see, and feel and know
All that my soul hath felt and known,
Then look within the wine cup's glow,
See if its brightness can atone,
Think if its favor you would try,
If all proclaimed—"Ta drink and die,
Tell me I hate the bowl—
Hate is a feeble word,
I hate, abhor,—my very soul
By strong drink's guilt is stirred
Whenever I see, or hear, or tell
Of the DARK BEVERAGE OF HELL.
Go, hear, and see, and feel and know
All that my soul hath felt and known,
Then look within the wine cup's glow,
See if its brightness can atone,
Think if its favor you would try,
If all proclaimed—"Ta drink and die,

Jno. S. Frazer was called to the Chair, and Thos. D. Jones was made Secretary. Hon. Alex. Conner, of Owingsville, Commonwealth Attorney, was called upon and gave valuable information, telling some methods used by the people of Bath county in their recent great victory over the whiskey dealers.

Twelve pointed short speeches were made. This was an open meeting, to which all could come. A resolution was adopted that the Chairman appoint a committee of five who are to formulate plans. This committee will be announced at a meeting called at the discretion of the chairman.

SHOW TRICKS ARE EXPOSED

Stage Artisan a Fake in Many of His "Stunts"—Some Mysterious Magic.

When you see a man come out on the stage and shoot the ashes off a cigar which is being smoked by an assistant, don't believe all you see. A hatpin is run through the cigar, the point just reaching the ash. The assistant just pushes the knob at the other end and down falls the ash to great applause. Of course only blank cartridges are used.

Breaking two glass balls with two pistols is almost as simple. One of the pistols only is loaded, and with shot; the other has a blank cartridge. The loaded pistol is aimed between the two balls and the shot scatter, breaking them both—that's the trick.

Extinguishing several numbered candles by number on request of the audience is seldom more than a hollow joke. Behind each candle is a hole in the target. An assistant hidden behind it simply blows out the candle, taking care to blow the right candle at the right time—that is, when the pistol cracks.

Blindfold shooting simply means that the performer glances down his nose to a mirror fixed at an angle behind the back sight and aims as straight this way as if the handgrip were not there.

Painting a complete picture in a jiffy in the presence of an audience is also artifice. What looks to you like an immaculate and untouched canvas is in reality a finished picture covered with whitewash. All the "artist" does is to simulate painting while he merely wipes off the whitewash with his brush. The result is a picture that would require, if it were honestly done, at least a day's work.

Those awfully heavy looking dumbbells of the strong man are sometimes somewhat hollow at the core. You will notice they are always put in the same place, preferably on a special platform, when the man from the audience is invited to lift them. Under the platform are powerful magnets holding the weights down. Suddenly roll them off the platform and you can probably lift them in one hand, as that operation releases them from magnetic control.

STREET VENDERS IN PARIS

Probably Most Abused and Most Amusing Is the Chestnut Man—His Wares Are Delicious.

There are many amusing characters in Paris, and one of the most tormented and sometimes the most amusing is the chestnut man, who makes his appearance about the middle of October and stays until the first of April. Nobody knows what becomes of him then—he simply disappears. His first appearance is hailed with delight, for if there is one thing that the French "gamin" likes better than fried potatoes it is roasted chestnuts.

The vendor takes up his position at a street corner or at a window that he has rented in some little shop. His stock in trade consists of a big bag of chestnuts, a round sheet iron stove with a perforated top, and a place underneath to put charcoal. Then he begins operations. He takes out his chestnuts and cuts a gash in each one, so that they will not fly off into the street when they begin to get hot, and then he puts them on top of the stove, which he has filled with lighted charcoal, putting a grating or cover over them, and he calmly awaits developments. In a few minutes they are done, and he is ready for customers. They do not keep him waiting, especially if the day happens to be chilly. If there is anything better than hot, roasted chestnuts on a cold, damp day the writer does not know what it is. He has the greatest variety of customers.

There is no possible question that business prosperity in any town rises as the saloons disappear. The money that is expended in the saloon is divided between the liquor manufacturers on the one hand and the saloon-keepers and middle men on the other. It does not go into the stock of wealth of the community, but is much destroyed, so far as the community is concerned, as though it were thrown into the fire. At the same time two-thirds even omie value of the ability of every man who visits saloons at all is lost through the weakness that comes from drink. When people become accustomed to clean towns without saloons, cesspools, pig pens, and dens of vice, they will not tolerate any of these evil influences afterward.—David Starr Jordan.

TRICK WITH ROPE LADDER.

Wholesale Hypnotism Explains Work of Ceylon Juggler in His Many "Stunts."

An American resident of Ceylon recently wrote home the following account of the famous rope ladder trick:

"We sat in the compound, solemn and silent, as the magician's wife demanded, for he was the greatest of Ceylonese jugglers.

"There was a burst of weird music, and the man appeared with a rope ladder coiled in his hand. He looked at us, and then, with a graceful, powerful movement, he threw the ladder up towards the blue, sunlit sky.

"We all gasped. For the ladder stood erect in the air, its bottom a foot from the ground, and the top running up, up, up, till it was lost to view.

"We gasped. If this was not magic, what was it?

"A boy appeared. He put his foot on the erect and floating ladder's bottom rung, and he began, very slowly, to climb up.

"Up, up, he went. I counted a hundred rungs, a hundred and twenty-five, hundred and fifty. The boy became very small. I rubbed my eyes. The magician clasped his hands suddenly, the music burst into a wild strain—the boy and the ladder disappeared.

"They disappeared completely. I didn't see them again till the next afternoon, when the same trick was repeated. I had a hand camera along this time, and I made a half dozen snaps of different parts of the ladder trick.

These snaps came out well. They showed the magician, the orchestra, the compound. But they showed nothing—nothing whatever—of the ladder and the boy. Hence, it is plain that the famous rope ladder trick is a remarkable piece of hypnotism. There was no ladder, there was no boy. The magician had thrown us all into a trance, and made us imagine them."

TOD SLOAN AND THE KING

Monarch of Belgium Eats Potatoes Which Famous Jockey Had Discovered—His Object.

King Leopold of Belgium told a good story on himself and Tod Sloan some time ago which has found its way into the Paris newspapers.

"I was dining in a Paris restaurant," said the most democratic of kings, "and on looking around saw Tod Sloan, the American jockey, whom I had seen often riding at Longchamps, dining in solitary splendor at the next table. While waiting for my dinner to be brought I watched the little American and saw him, after tasting some fried potatoes that had been brought to him, summon the waiter angrily and bid him take the dish away. Now I had ordered fried potatoes also, and I had no difficulty in discovering, when mine arrived with suspicious promptness, that the very same dish Tod Sloan had disdained had been brought to me."

"I suppose," said a listener, "Your majesty summoned the restaurant man and had the waiter discharged?"

"Oh, no," replied the king, smiling. "I tasted the potatoes, and I discovered that Mr. Sloan was quite right. They had been cooked with rancid butter and were very bad. But I know that if I sent them away it would seriously injure the business of the place, so I went on eating them. You see, therefore, that nowadays a jockey can afford to be more particular than a king."

TRUCK COMPANY'S JONAH.

Every Time the Tailor Entered Engine House Fire Alarm Sounded—Now He Stays Away.

If there is one class of public servant more superstitious than another it is the firemen. Once a bluecoat has made up his mind that he is followed by a Jonah there is nothing that will convince him that he is wrong, says the Chicago Record Herald.

The captain of a West side truck company is no exception to the rule, and as a result, lies, the tailor, is exiled from the company's quarters. Lies is one who likes to spend his idle time around an engine house. When he first opened his little tailor shop near the truck house he dropped in to look over the quarters of the firemen. He volunteered to mend any clothing the men tore while at work on fires, and they accepted.

One night a fireman ripped the sleeve of his coat. The next morning the tailor came in and took the coat to repair. As he went out an alarm of fire came in. The firemen worked for five hours. Late in the afternoon the tailor returned with the repaired coat. While he was telling the firemen how he had fixed it, another alarm of fire struck in.

Every time the tailor came the gong sounded. One afternoon the captain heard one of the men grumbling.

"What is the matter, Mike?" he asked.

"Well, skipper, I may be wrong; but I think that tailor is a hoodoo."

The captain reflected. He began to believe Mike was right. Still he did not like to say anything to the tailor. He was a willing worker in the cause of the firemen. Yet the captain could not get the "hoodoo" idea out of his head. He decided to try it out.

The next four times the tailor came in the door the company was called out. Then the captain decided to act. He called the company together. They agreed with him. The tailor was a hoodoo.

The next time he came the captain started to tell him so. Before he had said ten words the company was called out again. When it got back the tailor was waiting in the door. One of the firemen caught him and pushed him outside.

"You are a prince of a fellow, all right enough; but you are a Jonah. The next time you want anything here tell us about it over the telephone. Every time you stick your nose in that door it means a fire alarm."

Lies concluded that he was a Jonah. He still continues to repair the firemen's clothes, but he never comes in the house when he delivers them.

COLLEGE LIFE IN SCOTLAND

Universities of Great Britain Are Different from Those in America—Rules Adhered To.

American college boys and high school boys would have found student life at the old Scottish universities very different from the free and easy good time they are used to at their own seat of learning. In the early part of the eighteenth century the students at some of the Scottish universities could not "shoulder or push" each other, could not stand at the gate, on the stairs or in the corridors of the college buildings for fear they would dispute with each other, could not play or loiter up and down in any of the courts while the classes were in progress, nor play ball, billiards or bowls.

A student—no matter how old he was—even after he had become a young man—was whipped for getting into a fight or hitting another student. He was fined for speaking coarsely or wickedly. He could not throw snowballs at anything or anybody, and during hours in the college building he could not speak a word in anything but Latin.

At Edinburgh the students wore scarlet gowns during classes. They lived in the town. There were no dormitories and they knew very little about each other in many cases. There were, and are to-day at Edinburgh no college sports as we know them, and little general college life.

YOUNG'S LUCKY STAR.

Commanding Officer of Ill-Fated Bennington Was on Shore When Explosion Occurred.

"Lucien Young was certainly born under a lucky star," said a lifelong friend, Col. Sam Donelson, at the Shoreham, alluding to the commanding officer of the ill-fated Bennington, and to his remarkable escape from injury by reason of his accidental absence at the time of the explosion, relates the Washington Star.

"Capt. Young used to be one of the most popular of all that brilliant galaxy who made Chamberlain's headquarters," continued Col. Donelson, "and many were the good stories of which he was the hero. There are old timers who still laugh over an affair in which he and John Chamberlain were the chief actors. They were bosom friends, and one day while lunching together, the subject of local equestrian statues coming up, they mutually agreed that the bronze representation of Gen. Thomas on horseback was the finest work of art of its kind in Washington.

"A few days afterward, singularly enough, it happened that Young and the late Senator Beck, of Kentucky, got to discussing the self-same topic in one of the cozy corners of Chamberlain's. Young repeated his opinion that the Thomas statue was preeminently above the rest, an opinion which the senator vigorously combated, arguing that it was not nearly so meritorious as the statue of McPherson, near by. The contention waxed warm, and finally Young, with crafty design, said he'd be willing to leave it to John Chamberlain to decide, the loser to stand a champagne supper for three.

The challenge was promptly accepted by Beck, and Chamberlain was called over and asked to umpire the case. Without a second's hesitation he decided in favor of the senator, to the utter surprise and chagrin of the naval officer.

"As Chamberlain backed away Lucien followed him, as soon as he could make an excuse, and, getting him in a quiet corner, began to call him objectionable names, to which epithets the prince of entertainers listened, meekly. 'John Chamberlain,' thundered the angry lieutenant, 'did you not less than a week ago agree with me that the Thomas statue was the handsomest in this town.'"

"I certainly did say that," quoth John, "and what's more, I am of the same opinion still."

"Then, why in the name of heaven did you not say so just now?"

"Well, Lucien, you and I are both men of the world, and I appeal to you as such if I could give a decision in favor of a lieutenant in the navy against a United States senator!"

PREVENTING SEA-SICKNESS.

Self-Leveling Bunk Is Latest Device for Aiding Travelers in Overcoming Illness on Water.

An ingenious self-leveling sea bunk for vessels, the object of which is to overcome the discomfort to the passenger of mal-de-de-mer, has been devised by a London dentist. It has now been in successful operation upon one of the mail boats plying across the English channel. The device comprises a swinging cot with four cords passing from the corners to the electric brakes, which automatically check any attempt of the cot to depart from its position. While the cot remains level, the cords are free to pass on and off the pulleys on the brakes. The slightest loss of horizontality of the cot causes mercury in four tubes to fall in some of them and rise in others, and so complete the electric current to the particular brake required to be put in operation to check the further loss of horizontality. The loss of level from the variation of the position taken by the passenger is automatically compensated; water being practically the same specific gravity as the human body, a heavy man will press more water to the foot of a specially designed water bed than a light weight, as also from side to side.

GIRLS INVADE POOL CAME.

Fair Sex Expands Knowledge of Sports to This Branch—Requires Great Nerve and Skill.

London.—The latest branch of athletic sports invading the strongholds of the male is polo. The fair sex has proved its ability in many branches of sport, and now is going in for polo. There are few games that require more nerve and skill, but the female sex has already proved that it is equal to almost any athletic game.

The first crew of girls to which no men were added, in a Ranelagh, England, in the presence of the queen and Princess Victoria. The rival teams were composed of three members each, known as the White and the Rainbows. The ladies were smart riding habits, and the clever manner in which they handled their ponies and mallets aroused the onlookers to enthusiasm.

According to reports of the game the women started in rather cautiously, but once in action they lost sight of all danger and played with surprising dash. There were many mishaps, so great was the desire to get a whack at the ball, but the game ended with out any of the members being hurt.

The example of these strenuous girls is sure to be followed by other society women of England, especially in view of the fact that the game will have the approval of the queen and Princess Victoria. The latter was so impressed with the game that she remarked, "I like the game very much, as a strenuous pastime for women. They will make the same interesting enough when they can play a little faster."

WOMAN KILLS BIG GAME.

Lion, Lynx and Two Wild Cats One Night in the San Bernardino Mountains.

San Bernardino, Cal.—A big lynx, a lion and two wild cats are the trophies which Mrs. A. R. Wright of this city displays as the result of one night's hunt for big game.

Mrs. Wright, with her husband and Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Wallace, has been camping at Table Mountain, in an unbroken section of the San Bernardino range. The women were absent on a fishing trip. Mrs. Wright decided that she would take a shot at some wild animal, and when she took up a position at sundown in the branches of a tree some yards from the camp, her position commanded a view of part of a trail to a nearby spring.

The moon had just passed out of an eclipse when she caught sight of the form of an animal striding away. With exclaiming aim she stretched the creature out with one shot. Not caring to leave her safe perch, she waited, expecting her husband soon to pass on the way to the camp. Half an hour later she took two shots at a lion and before assistance came had fired twice at other creatures. When daylight came it was found that she had bagged the animals named above.

GIRL WALKS AFTER YEARS.

Recovery Is Attributed to Prayers of Friends—Case Pronounced Hopeless.

York, Pa.—Ethel Vanderloot, daughter of Edward P. and Mary M. Vanderloot, of this city, and for 12 years an invalid unable to stand on her feet, "Papa, I want to get up and walk." Then she straightened up on her couch, raised her feet, and proceeded to walk across the floor.

She fell twice going from her bed to the top of the stairs. The greatest part of the distance to the dining room she walked alone and unaided. She had not walked before in 12 years. For six years she has not been out of doors. For the first time in six years the girl ate dinner with her parents at the table.

Physicians had pronounced her case hopeless. The father spent thousands of dollars for special treatment, but these proved that she could not get well. Mr. Vanderloot says he knows of no other reason for the sudden recovery than the prayers of his friends.

WOMEN HAVE NEW FIELD.

Make Valuable Assistants in Engineering and Architectural Drafting Rooms.

It is rather remarkable that the female draughting-room assistant has not been realized sooner, as this is a class girl for which women are temperamentally fitted. The presumption is that the usual lack of mechanical construction, incidental to the public impression of engineers and architects against them.

As may be recalled, however, that prior to the advent of the female bookkeeper and office assistant women were supposed to be similarly lacking in business ability, for which, as a matter of fact, they appear to possess a positive talent. Draughtswomen have made their appearance in some of the country's big shops. Those who have had experience with women in such capacities declare that for certain classes of work they are more accurate, as rapid workers.

Even in the field of the engineering department they are now making an appearance, the surveying work being occasionally entrusted to their direction. The Engineering Record mentions the fact that a female surveyor has just completed all the field work in connection with laying out the lines for a sewerage system and conducting other field work, incidental to the public improvements just inaugurated in a Wisconsin town.

CHARACTER IN BUILDINGS.

Good and Bad Qualities of a People Are Reflected in Their Houses.

Every race and every age unconsciously write their character in the buildings which they erect, in the kind of furniture they put in them, and in the kind of streets on which they place them, writes Lucia Ames Mead, in "A Little Talk About Architecture." In St. Nicholas, a great American city were buried 2,000 years under a great mass of ashes, as Pompeii was, and then excavated, it would be plainly seen what manner of people had lived in it. Our "sky scrapers" and tunnels and mechanical conveniences would show how ingenious we were and how our laws permitted even man to build without regard to what he or his neighbor's sunshine; they would show how we did business and how we cared chiefly for saving time and making money. Our city would show that we cared less for beauty than men did of former times. It would show that a few people were as rich as kings and lived in palaces, out that there were hundreds of thousands who were living in crowded tenements like ants in an anthill. Our school buildings would show how we cared for education and our churches would indicate our manner of worship. All our good and bad qualities would be revealed by the things we had made, even if all the books about us had perished.

CHEMIST'S NEW DISCOVERY

Compound That Doubles the Density of Stone and Preserves Metals.

It is reported that the Hungarian chemist, Baron, has discovered a liquid chemical compound which renders certain kinds of matter proof against the effects of time. This wonderful agent doubles the density of nearly every kind of stone and renders it waterproof. It parts to all metals qualities which oxygen and rust and is, moreover, a germicide stronger than any now known.

It is said that the learned scientist has made tests of this strange substance, which really sores, that have satisfied him of its remarkable powers.

Not the least interesting fact in connection with this discovery is the statement by the professor that years ago while traveling in Greece, he observed that the more ruinous of ruins that were over 2,000 years old was as hard and fresh and tenacious as if made but a year. Taking a piece of this mortar, he has worked on it for more than a year, and he expects to have discovered the secret.

SECT SHOWS NEW ENERGY

Pennsylvania Schwenkfelders Have Been Eager to Remarkable Activity.

After seeming to make little progress for a century and a half, the little sect of the Schwenkfelders, existing nowhere except in southeastern Pennsylvania, has, within the last few years, been roused into remarkable activity. With a total membership of less than 1,000 persons, they have contributed more than $50,000 for the work of evangelizing the life and writings of their founder, Casper Von Schwenkfeld. They have sent a missionary to China, and have organized churches in Philadelphia and Norristown, in addition to the six churches in rural districts of Montgomery, Berks and Lehigh counties, that have existed almost as long as the Schwenkfelders have been in America.

In connection with the organization of their newest congregation, that in Norristown, there is a manifestation of the latter-day tendency toward harmony among sects that once were prone to lay great stress on their points of variance. When Luther and Schwenkfeld disagreed at the time of the reformation, Luther vented his spleen on the house of God in a bitter letter, in which he declared: "In short, either you are the bondswoman of Satan."

Now, however, Norristown Schwenkfelders and the members of Grace Lutheran congregation hold services in the same church. The Schwenkfelders brought the group from the Lutheran recently with the understanding that both congregations shall have the use of the house of worship. Moreover, when the Schwenkfelders held their first service in the church the pastor of the Lutheran congregation made an address containing expressions of fraternal greetings on behalf of his people.

CAN DETECT HUMAN BLOOD

New Method of Distinguishing It from That of Animals Is Discovers.

Consul General Guenther of Frankfurt reports that the Prussian military surgeon, Dr. Uhlenhuth, who has been transferred to the hygienic institute of the University of Greifswald, has discovered a new method for distinguishing human from animal blood. In 1897 Dr. Uhlenhuth was assistant at the institute for infectious diseases at Berlin, and is a member of the commission for investigating the foot-and-mouth disease.

In the fall of 1909 Dr. Uhlenhuth published important investigations with reference to distinguishing between the albumen of eggs of various birds upon the basis of modern science, which is mainly the result of the researches of Borden of France and Ehrlich of Frankfurt. Uhlenhuth found that these albumens can be differentiated biologically. His researches resulted in the important discovery of a new forensic method, was soon confirmed on all mail blood so that it is now possible to tell with absolute certainty the origin of the blood of the most minute bloodstain in dry or in putrefied form. In his method, was soon confirmed on all sides, and has become of fundamental importance for forensic medicine. By his method he can tell the presence of horse meat in sausages and other smoked meat articles, which is a great service in advance for the examination of foodstuffs.

COVERED WITH SNAKE SKIN

Walking Sticks Increased in Cattle of Reptiles at Present an Adornment.

The man with the Panama couldn't help showing that he was proud of his stick. The walking stick is another old, and a man in the crowd asked him about it, it relates the New York Press.

"That's a snake skin cane," he said, "and I'm right in the language of the newest fad. Wasn't it Aaron who changed sticks into snakes in the old Bible days? Well, these are the finest of our countrymen up in the Adirondacks who are reversing the proposition—changing snakes into sticks."

"I spent several days at a friend's cottage up there last week," he continued, "and I found the fad growing so fast that the mountains are likely soon to be covered with reptiles as Ireland before the cattle's demands are satisfied. I bought this cane for two dollars and consider it cheap at the price."

"The natives kill and skin the large snakes of that region—ones with stripes and vivid coloring, if possible—and let the raw skin over an ordinary stick. The cane is then soaked in a strong solution of alum, which shrinks the skin perfectly around the stick. An artificial snake's head for a handle completes the outfit."

Tired Nervous

When you feel languid, tired, nervous and irritable, your vitality is low—your supply of nerve energy exhausted, and your system running down for lack of power.

The organs of the body are working poorly, or not at all, and you are not getting the nourishment needed. This soon impoverishes the blood and instead of throwing off the impurities, distributes it all through the body. This brings disease and misery.

Feed the nerves with Dr. Miles' Nerve, a nerve food, a nerve medicine, that nourishes and strengthens the nerves, and you will get strong and vigorous.

"My wife suffered with nervousness previous to a recent attack of typhoid fever, and was much worse, and could not do any work. She was very nervous when the last attack came, and was much worse, and could not do any work. She was very nervous when the last attack came, and was much worse, and could not do any work."

Aluminum Paper.

Aluminum coated paper for wrapping food substances is prepared in Germany by applying a thin coat of an aluminum solution of resin to an artificial parchment, then sprinkling powder over the surface, and finally submitting to pressure. It is claimed for this paper that it is not attacked by the air or by fats, is much cheaper than tin foil, and is not poisonous.

LIVES ON $10 A YEAR

WISCONSIN MAN BUYS ONLY BARE NECESSITIES.

He Fishes During Summer and Lays Up Great Stores for Winter—Conducts Small Farm—Saves Service in Civil War.

Delton, Wis.—Near Mirror Lake, Sauk county, is a log cabin in which a man has lived for 30 years on ten dollars a year. George Skinner is his name and he seems perfectly content.

The old man is a civil war veteran. When he was discharged at the end of the war he had money enough to purchase an acre of ground on the shores of picturesque Mirror lake. In this acre of ground he planted vegetables and fruit trees. Close to the shore he grows a large number of blackberry bushes and in the garden behind it are long rows of strawberries. Over the fence that separates the yard from the road are wild roses. Here the veteran makes his home.

How does he live? Each day he takes his fishing rod and goes down to Mirror lake. That is his pork barrel. The fish that he draws out of those waters supply his dinner, likewise his breakfast.

The vegetables and meat made from corn grown in his garden complete his diet. For his lake fishing Skinner has built himself a boat which is as unique as himself. In order that he may not propel his boat at the same time he has invented an extraordinary contrivance.

At the stern of his boat he has a little life of a river steamer. This is turned by means of a chain running on logs and attached to a crank that the old man turns with one hand as he trolls with the other. From this strange craft, nicknamed "the flying machine" by the people of Delton, Skinner does his angling.

Skinner lives during the winter as well as he does in summer. From the over-abundance of one season he saves enough to meet the necessities of the other. During the summer days he fishes continuously. He catches on an average 100 fish a day, mostly small ones. Ten of those suffice for his two simple meals.

The other 80 are carefully cleaned and stored away in great barrels of brine kept in the cellar of his cabin. When he has enough barrels of fish stored away to last him through the winter he stops fishing, as he thinks it is a sin to kill any creature, even a fish, except for food.

From his garden he gets his vegetables and berries. Everything that he needs is supplied from nature's "pork barrel."

The ten dollars which he spends annually for tobacco, fish hooks and clothing.

No need to fear sudden attacks of cholera infantum, dysentery, diarrhoea, summer complaint of any sort if you have Dr. Fowler's Extract of Wild Strawberry in the medicine chest. 8 ct.

REVIVES LOST ART.

POTTERY-MAKING, 2,000 YEARS AGO, BROUGHT TO LIGHT.

Harry Firth, an Englishman, duplicates the celebrated Blackware of the Etruscans—Hits on Scheme by Roundabout Route.

London.—Examples of an art lost more than 2,000 centuries and only recovered by accident, have been exhibited recently by Harry Firth, of Kirby Lonsdale, England. The work duplicates the famous blackware of the Etruscans.

Mr. Firth spent the first 40 years of his life traveling doors for the spirit of Kirby Lonsdale. He was a common gardener, caring in the neighborhood of six dollars a week. In 1880 he became interested in wood carving, through the instrumentality of the Arts and Crafts Guild, an institution which quickly won his admiration. Mr. Firth, a little daughter, his wife and other members of his family joined the student ranks. He took up wood carving, and at the end of the first week he had had other members of his family who had been embossed leather, and all three have made a wonderful success.

Mr. Firth speedily found that his designs were difficult of execution, however, as he had no model with which to guide the movements of his chisel. Hence he was quick to avail himself of a suggestion that he model his work in wood, afterward copying the design in clay.

For a year or more he laboriously copied the designs of Etruscan blackware, plastic models to a neighboring brick kiln, where they were baked hard. By degrees his interest in clay overhauled his interest in wood, and instead of molding mere designs for his chisel to copy he tried his "primitives" hand at original work in pottery. The same success which had met his wood carving followed him in this, and the same energy which had carried his models seven miles to a brick kiln, carried his limit in the garden carried his pots and his vases over a same tedious road to the brick kiln.

A few months, however, and he saw that he had better reach his limit in a creative potter or he must devise new means for firing his clay. This he did by building for himself a small oven in a little deserted shed whose owner allowed him its use free of charge. It was in this shed and in a little testing box a man has lived for 30 years on ten dollars a year.

George Skinner is his name and he seems perfectly content. The old man is a civil war veteran. When he was discharged at the end of the war he had money enough to purchase an acre of ground on the shores of picturesque Mirror lake. In this acre of ground he planted vegetables and fruit trees. WINS SWEETHEART BY RUSE

Parent Raves Behind Bars—Daughter Escapes Xan of Choice—Father Is Liberated.

St. Paul, Minn.—A story of how "Joe" won a girl was developed in the private court. William L. Wallace, of this city, was arraigned to be examined as to his sanity. The physicians said he was perfectly sane and then the story came out.

The old man was arrested on complaint of his daughter. A young man called on the girl, Miss Virginia Wallace, at her home. The father answered the knock and promptly ejected the young man. The young man's name was Joe. He was the son of a man who was walking up and down the sidewalk in front of the house the daughter is alleged to have let the young man go into the house through a rear window.

The father discovered this and tried to get Joe out of the house. He gave vent to some strong language and pounded on the door, when the daughter telephoned to the Margaret street police station. The police arrived by a crazy man. When the police arrived they found the father storming about and promptly took him away without knowing who he was.

WORKS WONDERS.

A Wonderful Compound. Cures Piles, Eczema, Skin Itching, Skin Eruptions, Cuts and Bruises.

Doan's Ointment is the best skin treatment, and the cheapest, because so little is required to cure. It cures piles after years of torture. It cures obstinate cases of eczema. It cures all skin itching. It cures skin eruptions. It heals cuts, bruises, scratches and abrasions without leaving a scar. It cures permanently. Mt. Serling testimony proves it.

T. A. Garrison, farmer, five miles west from town on the Grassy Lick pike, says: "When I state that Doan's Ointment is the best remedy for healing and allaying irritation that I ever came across I know what I am talking about and I base my opinion on the following: For a number of weeks I was greatly troubled with a bad sore on the back of one of my hands. It was caused from a bruise and so painful was it at times that I could scarcely use my hand. In spite of all I could do and the use of numerous salves, ointments and everything that I could hear of, the irritation only became worse and kept gradually spreading. Doan's Ointment was brought to my attention and I procured a box of P. O. Doan's drug store. I had but little faith in it, but after one or two applications I noticed the inflammation being reduced and it was only a short time before the trouble was entirely removed."

For sale by all dealers. Price 50 cents. Foster-Milburn Co., Buffalo, New York, sole agents for the United States. Remember the name—Doan's—and take no other. 10-2t

The Cosmopolitan announces a series of tales by the "funniest of all story tellers"—W. W. Jacobs. If the others are as good as "Four Pigeons" in the October issue, there is no doubt that Mr. Jacobs deserves that title. Nothing that we have read in a long time has made us laugh more heartily. The situations are ludicrous in the extreme, as are the illustrations drawn by Will Owen, the famous English caricaturist.

Cure for Sick Headache.

We had a letter from a lady in Boulder, Colo., that should be of interest to people troubled with sick-headache. She writes that she had these spells four times a week, was obliged to remain in bed from 8 to 10 hours each time. The attacks became more frequent, doctors done no good. Seeing an advertisement of Dr. Cass's Improved Liver Pills, she decided to try one more, and sent for a box. She had a sick spell last night, and she says she has not had a sick spell for over 6 months. Druggists sell these pills. They cure sick-headache every time. One for a dose. Made by Dr. Bonomo Co., Philadelphia, Pa. For sale by W. S. Lloyd. 8-4t

Overconfidence.

It is a dangerous point in any man's career when he feels sure of his position or his fame. Overconfidence is the first sign of a decline, the first symptoms of deterioration. We do our best work when we are struggling for our position, when we are trying with all our might to gain our ambition, to attain that which the heart longs for—Success Magazine.

Kentucky Proposes a Change in Manner of Voting.

(Lexington Morning Herald.) And now Kentucky proposes to discard the experiences of all her sister States, of the other English speaking peoples, and of nearly every civilized nation, and to return to the old method of voting viva voce. Before taking such a step should pause long and think hard. What are a few of the reasons, pro and con, for such a change? It can most strongly be urged that the elective franchise is a public trust and, because of this, to its exercise a public responsibility should attach. And such would be an unanswerable argument in the ideal State. In the same way that the Congressman answers to his constituency, so should the individual voter answer to his fellow voters. On the other hand, it is said that we are by no means in the perfect state and that certain large classes of the voters are susceptible to influence and intimidation. It is pointed out that in England until the secret ballot bribery and corruption of every kind flourished; that in our States we had voting in "blocks of five" and by the wholesale in our great cities. Bribery, intimidation and corruption of various sorts continue to be practiced even now, but the advocates of the secret ballot say with greatly diminished effect. The secret ballot is an expression of national opinion against all interference with individual judgment. It has promoted the tranquility of election, both here and in England. It is of prime importance that absolute freedom of choice between candidate and parties shall be given to the individual. Moreover, it is pointed out that in all history and among practically all peoples wherever the practice of deciding questions by vote has obtained, some form of secret ballot has always been found necessary in order to secure untrammelled action by the voter.

To the Editor of The Herald: The last State Legislature in submitting to a vote of the people of Kentucky a constitutional amendment providing that in the future all voting at every election shall be viva voce, presented an issue more important to the future welfare of this State than any question that has arisen since the Civil War. It is high time that the voters awake to its importance.

I submit that in the light of all the experiences of the past the vote against such amendment should be overwhelming. Patrick Henry, when aiding in laying the foundation of our Nation, said that there is but one lamp by which our feet are guided and that is the lamp of experience. More even than in his day should we guide our steps by such lamp in every crisis of our State and national affairs. When, therefore, the struggle of many generations has resulted in a nearly perfect ballot, it behooves us to pause long and think deeply before we of Kentucky set our faces in the opposite direction.

History teaches us that every civilized nation has, at one time or another, found the secret ballot necessary. The fine Athenian democracy, at the height of its great development, when it came to decide a question involving the life or honor of the State, used the secret ballot. It was felt by them that in no other way could the citizens arrive at the highest and best results. So in our own time. For more than sixty years England debated the open or the secret ballot. After trying for several hundred years the viva voce method she finally abandoned it for the Australian system. In the same way, Australia, with institutions such as ours, came to the same conclusion. Since 1887 practically every American State has reached the same system. I know that it will be said that what all other States and English speaking nations, not to cite European examples, have done, is not conclusive evidence that they have reached the right result; still, it follows that a State should give itself pause before it sets itself in opposition to the deliberate opinion of all civilization.

The viva voce vote would increase out of all proportions the influence of Louisville and the manufacturing cities of the State. In Louisville, as in all great cities, there is a large floating, worthless population. The political boss of either party with such at his command would occupy a tenfold stronger vantage ground than now. And when to this great vote is added the thousands of men who are employed by the public service corporations, such as railroads, water works, etc., which are always seeking something from the public, the balance of power is given

LOST CHILDREN OF ISRAEL

These People Look for End of the World in 1916—Meetings Largely Attended.

The end of the world is definitely predicted by a set of Israelites who are actively preparing for the catastrophe. A party of these believers passed through New York recently on their way from Australia to Michigan, where they will await the end. Incidentally, the catastrophe is expected in 1916.

The sect calls itself the "Lost Children of Israel." Most of the members of the tribe are wealthy. They are a strict vegetarians, and eat nothing except what they grow themselves. On the trip over the Princess Irene they lived on the food they had brought with them, and none of them ate anything served to them by the ship's steward.

The first leader of the tribe was Johann Southcott, who held the position in 1792. The others who have been leaders are Richard Brother, Peter Shaw, George Turner, James Jerrill and the present king and queen of the tribes, Benjamin and Mary Purnell, who expect to ride in the golden chariot into Heaven when the time comes. The money of every member is put into one common purse, and this purse is placed in the hands of the leader, who disburses it.

The original members of the sect started from Benton Harbor, Mich., in November, 1903, ostensibly to circumnavigate the globe. They journeyed by way of Vancouver, B. C., where they set sail for the Orient. After stopping at Honolulu for a short time they continued on to Melbourne, Australia.

Melbourne their meetings were largely attended, according to Edmund Burley, one of their leaders. They held many overflow meetings at the time "Eljah" Dowie was driven out of the same town and compelled to leave the country.

After establishing a colony at Singleton, Australia, their converts greatly increased. Many Austrians volunteered to go with them around the world. Their number was supplemented in England, where they conducted meetings. The appearance of the members of the tribe is calculated to attract attention. The men wear their hair long, hanging as low as their waists. This, they declared, was in accordance with the teachings of Moses, but the specific reason for their long hair, they said, was that they were walking in the footsteps of Christ, whose hair was never shorn. The dress of the men is fantastic, to say the least. High felt hats of the style worn a century ago are worn by all. Long frock coats of good material and well fitting trousers of like material and stout shoes complete their attire. "The lost tribe" arrives at its conclusion that the world will come to an end by 1916 by reasoning that as there were 2,000 years between Adam and Noah and 2,000 years between the time of Christ and the present time, 1916 will complete the cycle.

MORALS WITH ATHLETICS.

Physical Culture Has Great Power to Do Bodily as Well as Mental Good.

No one familiar with athletics will deny their moral and physical impacts. They are a power for good in the sense of physical worth, and are factors in the making of morality that should not be underestimated. It is a familiar contention that athletics have too important a place in a college curriculum, says the Seatle Post-Intelligencer. This is logically unsound if educational institutions are to be educational in the complete sense of that term. Development is out of harmony if there is only mental development. What of the moral stature and the physical parts? Are they to be neglected? A great athlete of the old school, who had outlived his day and generation in the athletic world, said his period of superiority had been greatly lengthened because he had early recognized the fact that muscular tissue would deteriorate if the individual formed bad habits. He said that he did not use liquor or tobacco because both were injurious. He did not swear, because the swearing habit caused him to lose his self-control. This man liberally cultivated sobriety, temperance and the virtues that discipline men's natures and make for better characters, as a means of promoting his physical superiority over other athletes. To-day there is hardly a professional wrestler or prize fighter who either drinks or uses tobacco. An instance is found in the life of self-disciplined creature. He knows that to use either narcotics or stimulants means to lose his nerve.

BOOTS A LUXURY IN CHINA

Common People Only Wear Them When It Rains—Are Designed for Aristocrats Only.

The common people in China wear boots only when it rains. The rest of the time the use of modern footwear is confined to officials, soldiers, sailors and servants.

The commonest form of foot covering is the shoe of the peculiar shape familiar to all, but the coolies have to content themselves with sandals of straw or goat-horn.

Shoes for women are made at home, and only in Shanghai are they ever exposed for sale in the shops. Of late years there has been a large sale of rubber shoes patterned after the Chinese shapes, but of accidental manufacture, and these are growing in favor as wet weather shoes among all classes. These shoes are made both in Germany and the United States and are now to be found on sale at all of the treaty ports, though they have not yet been largely sold in the interior.

The Manchus wear shoes perched upon small stilt, and in the winter these are wadded with sheepskin as a protection against the cold.

THE LATERAN HOLY TABLE

Doubt Rests on Authenticity of the Article—Brought to Rome by Empress Helena.

Like so many other relics, doubt has sometimes been cast on the authenticity of the holy table at St. John Lateran, says the Tablet. But it would seem as if doubt rested on no stronger foundation than the mere absence of detailed historical proofs. It is probable, though not certain, that the holy table was brought to Rome by Empress Helena, together with the holy cross and other mementoes of the passion, and it is quite certain that in the tenth century the table had already been long preserved in St. John's. It used to be kept at the high altar, whence it was transferred in the tenth century to the chapel of St. Thomas, and from there in the eighteenth century to the loggia in the apse, until it was finally moved by Pius IX. to its present shrine over the altar of the blessed sacrament. The table (or rather the large part of it which is still preserved) is of cedar; it measures about five feet square and is over an inch in thickness.

How you admire the man who catches you doing a good deed on the sly.
